INTRODUCTION

PROVENANCE

The material was received from Dr. Baker's family in 1985 for cataloguing by the Contemporary Scientific Archives Centre and deposit in the Bodleian Library, Oxford, as stipulated in his will.

Correspondence about the Society for Freedom in Science, which Baker cofounded with M. Polanyi, does not form part of the present deposit.

PRESENTATION

The material has been sectionalised to follow the sequence of the catalogue compiled in 1979 (CSAC 69/7/79) with Section D (Research and publications) in the present catalogue replacing Section D (Publication) in the earlier catalogue.

DESCRIPTION

Section D includes a sequence of notebooks covering Baker's undergraduate and research careers and reflecting his interests in microscopy, chemical contraception and scientific biography. There is also a major accumulation of more varied material (correspondence, notes and drafts, and background material) respecting research undertaken towards the end of Baker's life on the humane killing of crustacea.

Section E, the most substantial in the supplementary catalogue, also reflects interests on which Baker concentrated in his last years - anthropology and race. In particular it contains very considerable documentation (drafts, correspondence with publishers and colleagues) for Baker's book Race, published by the Oxford University Press in 1974. N.B. E.50-E.52, the autograph ms. of chapter 23, was formerly D.1 in the earlier catalogue (CSAC 69/7/79).

Section F contains what survives of Baker's general scientific correspondence. Much is in the form of photocopies, the originals being retained by Baker's family.

Section G is a very small biographical section, also principally photocopies of material in family hands.

LOCATIONS OF FURTHER MATERIAL

Diaries and other material relating to scientific expeditions to the New Hebrides in the 1920s and 1930s are retained by Baker's family.

Index cards used by Baker in respect of his work on anthropology and race are preserved at the Wellcome Unit for the History of Medicine, Oxford.

NOTEBOOKS

Undergraduate notebooks

- D.1 Black soft-cover notebook, n.d., containing Baker's drawings of dissections, transverse sections, skeletons, etc.
- D.2 Notebook identical in format to D.1 but lacks front cover, n.d. but possibly 1920 when Baker joined the Marine Biological Association of the United Kingdom (see F.22). Contains Baker's drawings of transverse sections, etc. and (on first page) an address in Plymouth, perhaps where Baker stayed while using the MBA laboratory there.
- D.3 Hard-backed notebook, inscribed on outside cover 'Morphology II', n.d.
- D.4 Hard-backed notebook inscribed on flyleaf 'Essays on subjects likely to be set in the Final Examination in Zoology, June 1922'.

Research and publications

Research Notebooks

- D.5 Blue hard-backed notebook inscribed on flyleaf with title 'Microscopical Preparations' and Baker's New College, Oxford, address. Contents relate to various experiments on testes, sperms, larvae, embryos, etc. The first are dated in May 1923.
- D.6 Hard-backed notebook inscribed on outside cover 'Experiments and Observations on Sperms', with contents list on inside front cover. Notebook used November 1930-September 1934.
- D.7 Hard-backed notebook inscribed on outside cover 'Meteorology Final Classified Record'. Relates to Baker's 1933-34 New Hebrides expedition.
- D.8-D.15 'Microscopical Preparations'. A sequence of eight hard-backed notebooks covering the period 1934-70.
- D.8 June 1934-April 1944
- D.9 May 1944-January 1950
- D.10 January 1950-September 1952
- D.11 September 1952-July 1954
- D.12 July 1954-May 1957
- D.13 May 1957-August 1960
- D.14 August 1960-August 1964
- D.15 August 1964-April 1970
- D.16 Hard-backed notebook entitled 'Abstracts of books and long papers, and of all papers on the cell-theory. Vol.18'. Includes Baker's notes of lectures and research talks. The notebook was probably in use 1957-60, though it contains abstracts of books and papers published before 1957.
- D.17 Hard-backed notebook entitled 'Abstracts of books and long papers. Vol.19'. Includes Baker's notes of lectures and research talks (for example C.D. Darlington's lecture to the Genetics Society on 'The evolution of man: the biological interpretation of history', May 1962). Latest date 1964.

Research and publications

Abraham Trembley of Geneva

Baker's biography of the eighteenth-century Swiss scientist Abraham Trembley was published in 1952.

- D.18-D.31 'Abraham Trembley. Preliminary Materials for a Biography'. A sequence of 14 notebooks containing Baker's notes on publications and original manuscripts relating to Trembley. The first notebook has pasted inside front cover a letter from H. Schuman inviting Baker to contribute a book to a history of science publications project, 1945.
- D.32-D.35 'Trembley Revised Materials'. 4 notebooks, volumes 1, 4, 7 and 11. Volume 11 contains provisional plan of chapters, index to notebooks and a 'state of the book on 10th Feb. 1950'.
- D.36 Ms. drafts and correspondence, 1969-75, re article on Trembley for Dictionary of Scientific Biography.

NOTES, DRAFTS AND CORRESPONDENCE

- D.37 Microscopy
Ms. drafts, brief correspondence, etc. re microscope designed by Baker for use of biological students, 1966-71.
- D.38 Breeding Seasons
3pp. ms. draft of address to conference on breeding seasons, 2 January 1968; letter of thanks from D. Lack.
- D.39-D.92 Humane killing of crabs and lobsters
Baker's interest in animal welfare was of long duration. In 1939 he had assisted the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals in the prosecution of an angler who had used a live fish as bait and in the mid 1950s he had undertaken research at the Marine Biological Laboratory, Plymouth, on the humane killing of crabs. However, almost all the extant material respecting Baker's animal welfare interests relates to his work on the humane killing of crabs and lobsters carried out in the 1970s at the Department of Zoology, Oxford, under the auspices of the Crusade against all Cruelty to Animals/

Research and publications

Humane Education Centre.

Baker sought in this later research to demonstrate that crabs and lobsters might be killed painlessly by boiling if they had first been stunned by passing an electric current through their bodies. In 1975 the results of Baker's research were announced at a press conference and he gave an address at the Humane Education Centre which also published three scientific papers detailing the research.

SECTION E ANTHROPOLOGY AND RACE E.1 - E.193

INTRODUCTION TO SECTION E

Baker's anthropological interests were first manifested in an article on Cromagnon man published in Endeavour in 1968 but his major contribution to the subject was his monograph Race published by the Oxford University Press in 1974. This large book of 625 pages appeared after long gestation and many difficulties with prospective publishers.

The authors of the Royal Society Memoir of Baker (Biographical Memoirs of Fellows of the Royal Society, 31, 1985) identify the origins of Race in questions raised by its author's contacts with the peoples of the New Hebrides on his visits there in the 1920s and 1930s (Memoir, p.54). Baker in his own notes on 'how I came to write the book' (E.174) states that in the 1950s he was collecting information 'on physical differences between races; and on the question whether inborn mental differences might exist' and refers to visits to Uganda in 1957 and 1964, South Africa in 1961 and Rhodesia in 1962. In the present collection of Baker's papers there is no material bearing on the eventual book before 1960.

In a letter to the publishers, Allen & Unwin, of December 1961 (E.55), Baker gave notice that he was to apply for sabbatical leave to devote seven months to a study of racial equality, and to writing on the subject. He hoped to have a manuscript ready for Allen & Unwin by early 1963 and began writing consecutively on his subject in October 1962. It was not however until November 1966 that he announced the completion of the manuscript of a first introductory volume of his book on race - at that point entitled 'The equality or inequality of human races'. Allen & Unwin rejected the manuscript, as did a succession of publishers on both sides of the Atlantic before the projected work on race was accepted by the Delegates of the Oxford University Press in April 1969. In a letter to Methuen of 5 July 1971, Baker gives his own version of the events leading to the OUP's commissioning him to complete his manuscript on race and the important part played in this by a favourable report from P.B. Medawar (E.58).

The publication of Baker's book on race (now called simply Race) was delayed until 1974 - in part by Baker's considerable expansion of the original manuscript. In the words of The Royal Society Memoir, Race 'received very mixed treatment and was a source of great disappointment to its author'. Baker was particularly unhappy with the reception of the book in the USA and its slow sale there, which he attributed in part to a conspiracy of silence on the part of the media and in part to a lack of support from the OUP in New York. He was very pleased to cooperate with a German publisher in bringing out a shortened version of Race but disappointed by the refusal of the OUP to countenance a shortened version or paperback edition in English. Towards the end of his life Baker secured the rights of Race from the OUP to facilitate its re-publication in America by a smaller publisher, Foundation for Human Understanding, Athens, Georgia.

2 folders.
- E.152 Correspondence re reviews of Race, 1975-76.

E.153-E.173 'Race: a sequel'

As soon as Baker had seen Race through to publication in 1974, he began work on a sequel. By March 1976 however he had decided to concentrate on producing scientific papers on various aspects of the racial problem hoping, if his health permitted, 'to fuse them altogether, with new material as well, into the book that I envisage ('Race: a sequel')'. See E.126. The material presented here is largely that discarded from Race at the request of his editor at OUP.

- E.153 Typescript lists of topics probably related to arrangement of index cards.
Two copies, not identical.
- E.154 'Abstracts of books for Race: a sequel'.
- E.155-E.173 'Papers on race not used in the first edition of my book, but well worth keeping for the second edition or for another book'.

Contents of a folder so inscribed.
- E.155 Pages omitted from Chapter II [Introduction to Part 3. Studies of Selected Human Groups].

2pp. draft (with Baker's note 'Discarded from my book at Richard Brain's repeated request, but IMPORTANT: KEEP!'); 1p. draft of the same (with virtually identical note by Baker); references on cards.

E.188, E.189 Craniometry.

Baker gave demonstrations of a portable craniometer at the Royal Society in May and June 1976. In a letter of 21 March 1976 to C. Putnam (E.126) Baker explains that he had invented a new craniometer for comparing the skulls of different races and had been asked to demonstrate it at one of the two Soirées that the Royal Society held each year.

'This is going to happen on 6th May. It bears, of course, on our problem, and will be helpful. People will of course be able to chat with me as a [sic] sit the whole evening beside my demonstration. We can talk about race! These Soirées are well attended by people who matter'.

E.188 Brief correspondence and 'data obtained by those who used my craniometer at the Royal Society on 6th and 7th May 1976, to find the location of the sphenion'. Baker's subjects included pressmen, fellows of the society and 'selected' schoolchildren.
