GENERAL INTRODUCTION

The material was received from the Society of Thoracic and Cardiovascular Surgeons of Great Britain and Ireland. It consists of the papers of A.G. Bryce relating to the Society. Bryce, a founder member of the Society, was its first Secretary and Treasurer until November 1946, when he was elected Vice-President, a position he held for three years; he served as President of the Society 1949-51.

The period covered is from 1931 when preliminary discussions were held about forming a Thoracic Surgeons' Club to 1959, but the material after 1951 (when Bryce ceased to be an officer) is very slight. The material is principally correspondence but also includes minutes, agendas and circulars and a sequence of printed membership booklets, 1934-58.

Of particular interest in the collection are the papers relating to the foundation of the Society in 1933, including the replies to the original invitations to join the Society (sent out by Bryce), to relations between the Society and the American Association of Thoracic Surgeons, especially in respect of the latter's journal, and to the overseas visits of the Society to Switzerland in 1934 and to Berlin and Bruges in 1937. Later material reflects the adjustments necessitated by both the Second World War and the establishment of the National Health Service.

One particular feature of the wartime material arises from Bryce's practice of typing his carbon copies of the Society's correspondence on the back of miscellaneous documents of earlier date. Often the documents used in this way are routine University of Manchester administrative papers but they may include Society papers. These papers have been kept in the chronological sequence where found and not re-assigned to the earlier date.

OUTLINE OF THE CAREER OF A. G. BRYCE

Bryce was born in Southport in 1890 and was educated at Bickerton House School and Manchester University Medical School from which he graduated in 1912. Apart from wartime service in the Royal Army Medical Corps, 1915-19, he spent most of his professional career in the Manchester area, holding appointments at the Manchester Memorial Jewish Hospital and the Manchester Royal Infirmary where he was appointed to the honorary staff in 1934.

In addition to the various offices he held for the Society of Thoracic Surgeons, Bryce was also President of the Thoracic Society and of the Manchester Surgical Society. He retired in 1955.
