GENERAL INTRODUCTION

PROVENANCE

The papers were received for cataloguing from the Medical Research Council Laboratory of Molecular Biology, Cambridge, and from Dr Celia Milstein (widow) via the Laboratory in May 2005.

OUTLINE OF THE CAREER OF CÉSAR MILSTEIN

César Milstein was born in Bahía Blanca, Argentina, on 8 October 1927, the middle boy of three sons. His father was a Ukrainian Jewish immigrant and his mother, a teacher, was also Jewish but born in Argentina although her family had originally emigrated from Lithuania. As a child Milstein developed an interest in biology at an early age. In an interview in 1998 he recounted that it stemmed from a holiday visit made by his cousin, a chemistry graduate student from the University of Buenos Aires, when he was just over seven years old, 'Her explanations of how she removed venom from snakes and used it to prepare antiserum to treat people bitten by poisonous snakes had a profound impact on me and awakened my interest in biology'.

After schooling at the Colegio Nacional in Bahía Blanca, Milstein went on to study chemistry at the University of Buenos Aires. Here he was active in student politics and met his future wife, Celia Prilleltensky. They married in 1953, taking a one year honeymoon trip travelling around Europe and Israel. Returning to the Instituto de Quimica Biologica at the University of Buenos Aires, Milstein studied for his doctorate under the direction of the eminent biochemist A.O.M. Stoppani, Professor of Biochemistry at the Medical School. To support themselves during this period both he and his wife worked part-time as clinical analysts, Milstein for Laboratorios Liebeschutz. He obtained his Ph.D. in 1957, for a kinetic analysis of the enzyme aldehyde dehydrogenase and on its completion Milstein was awarded a British Council Fellowship to go to Cambridge to work in the Department of Biochemistry under Malcolm Dixon, studying the mechanism of metal activation of the enzyme phosphoglucumutase. There he met Fred Sanger, with whom he formed a lifelong association, and completed a second doctorate. In 1961 he returned to Argentina as Head of Division de Biologia Molecular, Instituto Nacional de Microbiologia in Buenos Aires to continue his research into enzymes.

Upon returning to Argentina, the Milsteins found the political climate very different from before. Following a military coup '...political persecution of liberal intellectuals and scientists manifested itself as a vendetta against the director of the institute where I was working', Milstein later wrote. The situation was intolerable and in 1963 Milstein left Argentina for the second time and returned to Cambridge to rejoin Sanger at the newly established Medical Research Council Laboratory of Molecular Biology. Here he was to remain for the rest of his career, Head of the Protein Chemistry Subdivision 1969-1980, Joint Head of the Division of Protein and Nucleic Acid Chemistry 1981-1995 and from 1988 to retirement in 1995 serving as Deputy Director of the Laboratory. He became a Fellow of Darwin College, Cambridge in 1980 (Emeritus Fellow 1995, Honorary Fellow 2002) and an Honorary Fellow of Fitzwilliam College in 1982.

At the Laboratory of Molecular Biology, on the advice of Sanger, Milstein switched from enzymology to immunology and work on antibodies, proteins produced by the cells of the immune system in response to attacks by foreign bodies (antigens). His research focused on the genetic study of antibody diversification, how antibodies acquire their ability to fight specific antigens and the means by which pure antibodies could be produced in the laboratory. Milstein's research group was a lively one and many young scientists from all over the world, in later years especially from Spanish-speaking countries, came to research under him. It was with a German visiting researcher, Georges Köhler, who came from the Basel Institute for Immunology (Ph.D. University of Freiburg), that in 1975 Milstein invented the hybridoma technique for the production of monoclonal antibodies. By fusing antibody-producing cells with tumour cells, Milstein and Köhler were able to produce a hybridoma, which could then continuously synthesize antibodies that were identical to those produced by the antibody-producing cell before it was fused. Used as research tools, monoclonal antibodies revolutionised the way in which biologists viewed living systems but monoclonal antibody production also opened the way for the commercial development of new types of drugs and diagnostic tests in fields as diverse as cancer, the prevention of transplant rejection, pregnancy testing and the treatment of arthritis. In 1984 Milstein and Köhler received the Nobel Prize for Medicine for their work, along with N.K. Jerne, who had done theoretical work on the human immune system. Milstein and his research group continued to work in this field, improving and developing monoclonal antibody technology right up to his death, aged 74, on 24 March 2002. He was survived by his wife Celia.

Milstein won very many honours and awards. He was elected to the Fellowship of the Royal Society in 1975 (Wellcome Medal 1980, Royal Medal 1982, Copley Medal 1989, Croonian Lecture 1989) and in 1981 was made a Foreign Associate of the US National Academy of Sciences. Among the major prizes he received were the Avery-Landsteiner Prize of the Society for Immunology in 1979, the Wolf Prize in Medicine of the Wolf Foundation in 1980, the Robert Koch Prize (Germany) and Karl Landsteiner Award of the American Association of Blood Banks, both in 1982, and the Albert Lasker Basic Medical Research Award in 1984. These awards culminated with the award of the Nobel Prize in 1984. In 1995 Milstein was made a Companion of Honour for services to molecular biology and in 2000 the Medical Research Council awarded him its first Millennium Medal.

After the fall of the military government in Argentina in 1983 Milstein received many invitations to visit his native country and was accorded many honours, including in 1985 Honorary Membership of the Asociacion Argentina de Alergia e Immunologia, in 1988 Honorary Fellowship of the National Academy of Sciences of Argentina and Honorary Membership of the Sociedad Científica Argentina and in 2000 the Presidential Medal of Merit for Scientific Excellence. The same year he was made a Corresponding Member of the Academia de Ciencias de América Latina.

For further information on the life and work of Milstein see 'César Milstein CH 8 October 1927-24 March 2002' by M.S. Neuberger and B.A. Askonas, Biographical Memoirs of Fellows of the Royal Society, vol 51 (2005).

DESCRIPTION OF THE COLLECTION

The collection is presented as given in the list of contents. It is dominated by comprehensive documentation of the work of Milstein, and his research group, from the early 1950s to his death. A significant proportion of the material is in Spanish, reflecting his origins and his continuing connections with Argentina and the wider Spanish-speaking world.

Section A, Biographical, presents a range of material relating to Milstein's life and career. There are obituaries, curricula vitae and a range of biographical accounts and interviews. His career is patchily documented but includes university certificates, formal papers relating to employment at the Laboratory of Molecular Biology and the contents of his office notice board at the time of his death. There is very good coverage of awards and honours accorded to Milstein from 1977 onwards. It includes the Avery-Landsteiner Prize 1979, Robert Koch Medal 1980, Wolf Prize 1980, Karl Landsteiner Memorial Award 1982, Albert Lasker Award 1984, Copley Medal of the Royal Society 1989, Companion of Honour 1995 and of course the Nobel Prize of 1984. There are also the Argentine honours accorded him from the 1980s onwards. Of additional interest are the contents of his two bulky folders of honours declined; in particular Milstein was disinclined to accept honorary degrees. Personal correspondence is varied and ranges from appeals for help or support for causes to College functions in Cambridge.

Section B, Laboratory of Molecular Biology, comprises two components. There is a sequence of office appointment diaries covering the period 1993-2002, and Milstein's files on postgraduate and postdoctoral students and visiting researchers. These cover 1970 to 2002 and include many of the researchers from all over the world (especially from Argentina and the Spanish-speaking world) who spent time in Milstein's group. It includes documentation of Georges Köhler's research fellowship at the Laboratory.

Section C, Research, is the single largest component of the collection, in terms of size comprising over two thirds of the total. The section documents Milstein's scientific research from the University of Buenos Aires in the mid 1950s, the Department of Biochemistry in Cambridge and during his brief return to Argentina in 1961-1962, to his career at the Medical Research Council Laboratory of Molecular Biology up to and well beyond official retirement. It thus spans some fifty years of research in enzymology and molecular biology, and much of the material covers not only the work of Milstein himself but his wider research group. The earlier period up to and including the 1960s is represented in the form of bound notebooks but the greater part of the material, dating 1970-2002, is the contents of MRC ringbinders kept as laboratory notebooks and thus styled. It is highly technical in nature, covering laboratory techniques for the study of antibody behaviour, diversification and the production of monoclonal antibodies, and the notebooks contain much experimental data. Very significant documentation was kept by his longstanding laboratory technician and research officer J.M. Jarvis but many other researchers and research themes are represented. The section includes documentation of the administration of research in the form of records of the distribution worldwide of cell line samples from Milstein's laboratory and a little material relating to grant applications. There is also material relating to patents, including correspondence relating to the failure to patent monoclonal antibodies in the mid 1970s.

Section D, Lectures and publications, is divided into three subsections. The first presents drafts for some of Milstein's public and invitation lectures from 1965. He was always in considerable demand as a distinguished molecular biologist but following the award of the Nobel Prize invitations to lecture increased. Prestigious lectures documented here include the Sir Frederick Gowland Hopkins Memorial Lecture 1986, the Croonian Lecture of the Royal Society 1989, the Edward K. Dunham Lectures at Harvard Medical School 1992 and the Third Georges Köhler Lecture at the Max Planck Institut für Immunobiologie 1999. The second component, drafts and publications, is patchy. While it does not provide comprehensive coverage of Milstein's published output, it is of considerable interest because of the number of apparently unpublished drafts. The third subsection is photographic slides used for lecture illustration.

Section E, Societies and organisations, is not extensive. The material is mostly late in date, 1977-2002. Twenty UK, overseas and international bodies, including a number of Argentine establishments, are represented but there is significant material only for the Basel Institute of Immunology (Milstein was on the International Scientific Advisory Board), Celltech Ltd (member of the Science Council), the Fundación Juan March of Spain (assessing proposals sent to the Scientific Council of the Fundación) and the Royal Society.

Section F, Consultancies and commercial, is the smallest in the collection. It covers five commercial concerns with which Milstein was involved relating to the exploitation of antibody research. It includes Antisoma Ltd (which Milstein served as President of the Science Council 1990-1995), Cambridge Antibody Technology and Sera-Lab. There is also a little material relating to the Laboratory of Molecular Biology's Industrial Liaison Committee.

Section G, Visits and conferences, documents Milstein's overseas travel and attendance at meetings from 1965 up to his death. Milstein's presence was much sought after, particularly as a Nobel laureate, and especially in South America. Most of the occasions documented are meetings held in the UK and Western Europe, but Milstein's contact with Argentina increased following the fall of the military government in 1983, with visits documented in spring 1984, March 1986, April and December 1987, March and August 1991, March 1992 and March 1994. He also made a number of visits to other Latin American countries and to Spain. He very often travelled with his wife Celia, who sometimes participated as a scientist in her own right.

Section H, Correspondence, dates chiefly from the mid-1970s up to 2002, with little documentation for earlier decades. The bulk comprises the contents of Milstein's alphabetical sequence of 'General' correspondence files. Although there are few extended exchanges, significant correspondents include A. Cambrosio, A.C.G. Cuello, J.C. Howard, A. Karpas and A.J. McMichael, with a sequence of correspondence with various colleagues at the Argentine Fundacion Campomar 1991-2001. There is some further miscellaneous correspondence including letters exchanged with F. Sanger in the late 1950s and early 1960s, correspondence from colleagues and institutions in Argentina, letters relating to ascription of credit for monoclonal antibody W6/32, correspondence relating to the work of H. Bazin and references and recommendations.

There is also an index of correspondents.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

We are very grateful to Dr Celia Milstein and to Ms Annette Faux, Archivist of the Laboratory of Molecular Biology, for their help and encouragement.

SECTION C

RESEARCH, C.1-C.340

ca 1952-2002

This section documents Milstein's scientific research from the early 1950s at the University of Buenos Aires, Argentina, the Department of Biochemistry in Cambridge and his brief return to Argentina in 1961-1962, to his career at the Medical Research Council Laboratory of Molecular Biology, Cambridge up and well beyond official retirement. It spans some fifty years of research in enzymology and molecular biology.

The material mostly comprises bound notebooks and, generally later in date, the contents of MRC ringbinders kept as laboratory notebooks and so styled. A very high proportion of the material is in the hands of Milstein's researchers and collaborators, especially J.M. Jarvis, Milstein's laboratory technician/research officer from the mid-1960s, and S.C. Howe, technician 1972-1977.

There is documentation of administration of research in the form of records of the distribution worldwide of cell line samples from Milstein's laboratory and a little material relating to grant applications. There is also material relating to patents, including correspondence relating to the failure to patent monoclonal antibodies in the mid 1970s.

Ph.D. THESIS

Milstein's doctoral thesis, 'El papel de los tiles en la oxidacion enzimatica del acetaldehido', University of Buenos Aires.

93pp copy typescript in Spanish including figures, tables and references, and faded paper cover, originally bound with metal screws.

C.2-C.279 RESEARCH NOTEBOOKS AND BINDERS ca 1952-2002

C.2-C.58	Bound notebooks
C.59-C.206	Research binders
C.207-C.279	Research binders: J.M. Jarvis

C.2-C.58 Bound notebooks ca 1952-2002

The notebooks chiefly cover experimental work on mice and rats. The bulk date from the 1950s and 1960s - later work being mainly recorded in ringbinders - although Milstein continued to use this format up to his death. C.2-C.28 are predominantly in Milstein's own hand, those from C.29-C.58 are in a variety of hands, including those of J.M. Jarvis and S.C. Howe his laboratory technicians.

The contents are mostly tables of experimental results, with diagrams, calculations, etc. Many include intercalated pages of notes, graphs and photographic data intercalated or pasted onto the notebook pages. Some have an index of experiments.

Most of the notebooks bore one or more inscriptions on the cover or spine. These are reproduced in the catalogue entries.

C.2-C.11	Series of notebooks numbered 1-10 by Milstein, with many of the experiments numbered and dated, and continuing in sequence throughout the notebooks.	ca 1952-ca 1959
----------	--	-----------------

Numbers 1-7 (C.2-C.8) are mostly in Spanish, primarily from Milstein's time in Argentina prior to and after obtaining his doctorate in 1957 inscribed 'C. Milstein. Química Biología. Cátedra Prof. A.O.M. Stoppani, Facultad de Ciencias Médicas' (or variations thereof). Numbers 8-10 (C.9-C.11) are marked as being used by Milstein at the Cambridge Department of Biochemistry.

Most of the lecture notes are in English, but where there is Spanish language material this has been noted.

Many of the notes include details of slides accompanying the lectures. See D.131-D.152.

D.1	'Studies on PGM' (title also given in Spanish), ca 1960-1961	ca 1960-1961
-----	--	--------------

40pp draft lecture notes, 1p formulae and draft display cards.

The material was found in folder inscribed 'On the active centre of PGM'.

D.2	'Metal Enzymes', Department of Biochemistry, Cambridge, 1 February 1961	1961
-----	---	------

56pp draft lecture notes identified by inscription on original folder.

D.3	'Variations in amino acid sequence near the disulphide bridges of Bence Jones proteins' and untitled lecture on the same subject, 1966	ca 1966
-----	--	---------

13pp typescript draft lecture notes, ca.1966; 14pp manuscript draft lecture notes, 1966.

Found in folder inscribed 'Department of Biol[ology and] Chemistry Manchester University 9 February 1966'.

D.73-D.121 Drafts 1959-ca 2002 and n.d.

A chronological sequence of material relating to publications or to the intention to publish, ranging from rough notes to fully-prepared drafts. Where applicable reference has been made to Milstein's Bibliography at D.130 in the form Bibliog. ...

D.73 'Inhibicion y activacion de la DPN aldehido deshidrogenasa de levadura por iones metalicos' with A.O.M Stoppani. Bibliog. 9, 1959 1959

Found in folder inscribed 'T.C.', 'K+ [?Kt] Activation of aldehyde dehydrogenase'.

Copy of paper (part missing); typescript draft papers in English 'Mechanism of activation of aldehyde dehydrogenase by alkali metal ions' and 'Effect of metal ions on the activity of yeast DPN-aldehyde dehydrogenase', based on or partial translations of Bibliog. 9; figures; brief correspondence (in Spanish).

D.74 'The "ping-pong" mechanism of phosphomutases', annotated 'C. Milstein - unpublished (1964)' 1964

8pp typescript with manuscript corrections, and 1p figures.

Lectures and publications, D.1-D.152

- D.75 'The interchain disulphide bridge in B[ence-]Jones protein and in γ globulin B chains'. Bibliog. 25, 1965.
- Contents of folder so inscribed: 11pp manuscript draft paper with 5pp tables and figures, including photographs for plates, n.d. [1965].
- D.76 'A model for the interchain disulphide bond formation in Immunoglobulins', ca 1966. Not listed in Bibliog. ca 1966
- Annotated by Milstein 'Written about the time of 1st International Congress of Immunol[ogy]?'
- 9pp manuscript draft paper, 3pp calculations and readings, and photographs for plates and figures.
- Photographs for this item and for D.77 were originally found intermingled.
- D.77 'The distribution of O-phosphoserine in histone and other protein fractions of Chinese Hamster ovary cells' (amended title), ca 1967. Not listed in Bibliog. 1967
- 2pp copy manuscript draft paper with 1p references and 1p figures; 15pp typescript draft paper, with photographs for plates and figures.
- Photographs for this item and for D.76 were originally found intermingled.
- D.78 Citation classic: 'A possible precursor of immunoglobulin light chains', with G.G. Brownlee et al. Bibliog. 67, 1972 1986
- Brief correspondence.
- D.79 'Continuous cultures of fused cells secreting antibody of predefined specificity', with G. Köhler. Bibliog. 97, 1975 and Bibliog. 306, 2000. 2000
- Correspondence; forms (mostly fax photocopies); 11pp typescript draft with 1p figures and 3pp references; photograph for plate; proofs.
- An updated article entitled 'With the benefit of hindsight' was requested on the occasion of the 25th Anniversary of 'the Köhler and Milstein paper'.

VISITS AND CONFERENCES, G.1-G.94

1965-2001 and n.d.

Milstein's attendance at conference and meetings was much sought after, particularly as a Nobel laureate, and especially in South America. He made many visits, usually with his wife, Celia, who sometimes participated as a scientist in her own right.

The material includes letters in Spanish and French.

H.1-H.152	GENERAL CORRESPONDENCE	1970-2002
------------------	-------------------------------	------------------

This is Milstein's principal sequence of correspondence found in hanging files marked 'General' and arranged alphabetically. Within these files some groups of correspondence were found together by name of person (or in two cases by name of country), sometimes within a folder of their own. Titles have been reproduced in the catalogue entries.

The content of the correspondence varies. It may relate to scientific research, publications, invitations to meetings and requests for references but also can include personal news.

chronological order.

Much in Spanish.

H.11	1988-1991
H.12	1994-1999
	Includes 5pp typescript 'Reflexiones de un inmunologo sobre una leccion que nunca se aprende' by Milstein, sent to A.L. Gak.
H.13	2000-2001
H.14-H.24	'B General'	1973-2001
H.14	Baltimore, D.	1988
	Controversy over data used in article published in Cell .
H.15	Baralle, F.E.	1988-1999
	Baralle wrote from research centres in Milan and later Trieste, Italy.
H.16	Barnes, G.L, Bishop R., and Coulson, B.	1985-1986
	Re development of rotavirus monoclonal antibodies.
	Barnes, Bishop and Coulson wrote from the Royal Children's Hospital, Melbourne, Australia.
H.17	Barrantes, F.J.	1988-2001
	Mostly in Spanish.
	Barrantes came from Argentina to work with Nigel Unwin in the MRC laboratory.

Correspondence, H.1-H.187

H.18	Bold, A.J. de	1996
	Translation of 'A lesson never learnt' by Milstein into Spanish for internet journal Interscientia .
	Includes paper and biography of Milstein (in English), with Spanish versions.
H.19	Bothwell, A.L.M.	1988, 1990
	Bothwell wrote from the Yale University School of Medicine.
H.20	Brutkiewicz, R.R.	1995-1996
	Visit to MRC Laboratory, December 1995.
	Brutkiewicz was based at the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, National Institutes of Health, Bethesda, MD, USA.
H.21	Ba.-Be.	1973-2001

H.25, H.26	Cambrosio, A.	1991-1995
	Cambrosio was based at the Department of Humanities and Social Sciences, McGill University, Canada.

Correspondence, H.1-H.187

H.25	1991
	Draft of 'Between fact and technique: the beginnings of hybridoma technology' by Cambrosio, with Milstein's comments thereon.
	Includes discussion of the award of the 1984 Nobel prize to Milstein and Köhler.
H.26	1994-1995
	Re Milstein's Foreword to Cambrosio's book Exquisite Specificity. The Monoclonal Antibody Revolution . Includes copy of Foreword, 3pp typescript.
H.27	Capra, J.D.	1979-1997
	For the bulk of this correspondence Capra was based at the University of Texas Health Science Center.
H.28	Cérda Olmedo, E.	1990-1994
	Includes correspondence re Advisory Council of the Laboratorio Andaluz de Biología.
	Mostly in Spanish.
	Cérda Olmedo was based at the Department of Genetics, University of Seville, Spain.
H.29	Cereijido, M.	1992, 1994
	Mostly in Spanish.
	Cereijido was based at the Centro de Investigacion y de Estudios Avanzados, Mexico.
H.30	Claflin, L.	1991-1995
	Chiefly re proposed collaboration 1994-1995.
	Claflin was based at the University of Michigan Medical School, USA.

Correspondence, H.1-H.187

H.31	Cohn, M.	1991, 1999
	Correspondence re credit for work on lamda chains 1991; antibody workshops 1999.
	Cohn was based at the Salk Institute for Biological Studies, San Diego, USA.
H.32	Collins, W.P.	1984-1985
	Possible research collaboration.
	Collins (and colleagues) wrote from King's College School of Medicine and Dentistry, London.
H.33	Ca.	1992-1999
H.34	Ce.-Cl.	1988-1998

H.36	Cr.-Cu.	1979-1997
H.37-H.40	'Campomar'	1991-2001
	Correspondence with colleagues at the Fundacion Campomar, Instituto de Investigaciones Bioquimicas, Buenos Aires, Argentina.
	Much in Spanish.
	See also E.25.
	Milstein was a member of the Scientific Assessment Committee of the Instituto de Investigaciones Bioquimicas.
H.37	1991-1996

Correspondence, H.1-H.187

H.38	1997
	Chiefly re visit to Argentina, April 1997. Includes 13pp typescript ?lecture 'El impacto de la Industria en la Ciencia'; 'Un debate abierto' on the Instituto de Investigaciones Bioquimicas; and correspondence arising.
H.39	1998-1999
H.40	2000-2001
H.41, H.42	'Chile'	1995-1998
	Miscellaneous correspondents from Chile. In chronological order.
	Much in Spanish.
H.41	1995-1996
	Establishment of Presidential Science Chairs.
	Milstein was a member of the Jury appointing to these chairs, established by the Chilean President.
H.42	1998
	University of Chile institutional evaluation.
H.43-H.50	'Cuello'	1979-2000
	Much of Cuello's correspondence is in Spanish.
	A.C.G. Cuello was a distinguished neuropharmacologist. Like Milstein he was Argentine by birth but had left that country for political reasons in the 1970s. He held research and academic positions in the Departments of Pharmacology at both Oxford (1979-1985) and Cambridge, working with Milstein, before being appointed
